

Big Denny

Chez Pringler, the Okefenokee Swamp's oldest eatery, was noted for its local cuisine. Big Denny especially liked the frog legs, which he often ordered, but they were so tasty that he sometimes forgot his manners and swallowed them whole. One time, though, the hearty trencherman began to choke on one that caught in his windpipe. Luckily, Big Denny was an EMT and knew how to self-administer the Heimlich maneuver. He flung himself down on the floor— face first and hard!— and out popped the frog legs, with the rest of the frog still attached. You'd think after such a traumatic event Big Denny would approach his meals with more caution. But he didn't. And that's naturally another story.