

Bigfoot

For 15 years, intrepid explorer Jeef Ikeaquist had been obsessed with finding Bigfoot, an ape-like creature that was said to inhabit the remote forests of Washington State. Those 15 years sabotaged a perfectly good cruise ship carnival barker career as he spent more and more time on the often nebulous cryptozoological road. After thousands of non-discoveries, Jeef was about to give up his quest when he received a tip that Bigfoot had been seen near the aptly named Sasquatch Inn in the northernmost corner of the state. Immediately, he raced to the Inn – only to discover to his enduring chagrin that the tipster should have said Bigfeet, for he found himself in the presence of the Inn’s proprietress’s size 99E Mary Janes. Sorry about that, Jeef.
