

Enrico “Robinson” Caruso

The great Italian tenor Enrico “Robinson” Caruso garnered many honors during his illustrious career. He sang before thousands of adoring fans at all of the major opera houses in Europe and the Americas. He also performed before many heads of state. After hearing him sing “La donna e Exxon-mobile,” a visibly moved Prince Meptang of Vojvodina promptly renamed the village of Petrovaradin “Enricoville.” But Caruso was never happier than when he was home on his ranch singing to his cattle. His three Holsteins, Bossie, Flossie, and Bloodbath, were always especially attentive and appreciative.