

The BagGagman

Carmine “Dink” Dinklaker, a Hackensack ne’er-do-well, had been invited to join the Formaggio crime family of Teaneck, and he was thrilled. He didn’t even mind paying his dues by starting at the bottom of the gang’s hierarchy as a bagman. At least, that’s what he thought he heard his caporegime say. Maybe his ears were playing tricks on him, because he also thought he was supposed to pick up “a block of heroin,” but instead found himself lugging around a flock of herons. Shortly thereafter, Dink made an appointment to see an audiologist.
