

Good Intentions

They say the road to Hell is paved with good intentions. That's Hell, Michigan, of course. Still, it's hard to drive on an intention, good or otherwise. Just ask Don and Darryl, two motorists who were on their way to Hell when the intentions they were driving on abruptly burst into flames. They escaped unscathed, through regrettably their car didn't. On the plus side, they discovered that a properly baked intention tasted a little like chicken. Being naturally born entrepreneurs, the two opened D and D's Intentionally Good Buffet, which thrived until one fateful day in June when the road gave up its last good intention. The business shuttered soon thereafter, and the two men still had no car, true story.
