

Huitzilopochtli

Blanche always hated the idea, but she finally agreed with her business partners Mindy and Cindy to model their root beer stand after the head of Huitzilopochtli, an Aztec god and patron of the city of Tenochtitlan, where Mindy once vision-quested. One week after the business opened – and one hour after that catastrophic meeting with the Health Department’s Office of Sterilization – the decision came back to haunt them when the head abruptly came to life and left no doubt as to why Huitzilopochtli was also known as the Aztec god of Human Sacrifice.