

Never Disappoint a Snake

Little Audrey Dinklaker loved snakes. And snakes, for reasons ophiologists couldn't fathom, loved Little Audrey! She merely had to sit in her stroller – anywhere, at any time – and eventually she'd have an audience of more snakes than you could shake a stick at. (Note: Never shake a stick at a snake.) No matter her parents regularly sprayed her with Snake Away™, the serpents kept coming. Remember the 2006 movie, “Snakes on a Plane”? All of the snakes were initially terrified to board the aircraft. But once Little Audrey waltzed up the gangplank and into the cockpit, the snakes couldn't follow her fast enough. There were so many of them that a few dozen were refused entry. And boy, were they ever sore! (Note: Never disappoint a snake.) Today, however, Little Audrey just wanted the companionship of her favorite slithering sidewinder, Bob. Thinking she saw him playing with some grown-ups on the sidewalk a few doors down, Little Audrey called out to Bob in her best come-hither voice. Unfortunately, the snake that responded was Medusa, a.k.a. “The Meanie.” Doubly unfortunately, Audrey was about to discover just how mean Medusa could be.
