

The Delinquent Miners

Preston Pringler, president of Acme Extraction Industries, thought he was treating his employees commendably by giving them free beer during their lunch break. However, worker productivity invariably suffered during the early afternoon. Word of the recurring bacchanal eventually reached the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which dispatched Agent Dinklaker to investigate. Sure enough, he caught Pringler distributing alcohol and, after quaffing a pint of his own, cited him for contributing to the delinquency of a miner. Or thirty miners, really.