

The Model 2

In the world of hand-held anti-tank grenade launchers – RPGs for short – there is no finer weapon than the Dinklaker Model 2 “Blow-Em-Up.” Built to resemble a Highland bagpipe, the Model 2 has an amazing range of two miles, though accuracy drops off rather a lot past sixty-five feet. The warhead is a general-purpose explosive for use against targets such as big box retail stores, cinema complexes that screen fantasy anime, and hybrid foreign cars. Oh, plus tanks. And not only does the Model 2 look like the classic Scottish aerophone, it even sounds like one. So the next time you hear that plaintive skirl of reeds and drones and a Prius is nearby, be ready to duck and cover.
