

No Complainer, He!

Ronald was many things – a lapsed Virgo, a motorcycle airbag salesman, one-third of the Bollywood Clarinet Quartet, in dire need of a shower and shave – but he wasn't a complainer. Take the time he received his long awaited Acme Postur-matic mattress. He could've told the company rep who delivered it (one whole year late!) that the user guide's interpretation of "extra firm" was way out of line. Instead, he tried to make the best of the situation – he figured out a different method for sleeping, one that involved ten extra aspirins per night and plenty of bandages. But he didn't get a really good night's sleep till he followed a piece of advice he'd heard from the Sermon on the Mount: "Turn the other cheek."
