

“Pumpkin”

In the Fula language of West Africa, “pumpkin” means hippopotamus belch, because when these animals eructate, they also spew partially digested vegetable matter that often bears a striking resemblance to the familiar squash plant. Its stench however, is more than enough to keep even the most ardent pumpkinophile at bay.