

Bartholomew P. Wolf

Contrary to popular belief, the idiom “wolf in sheep’s clothing” did not originate from a sermon by famous proselytizer Jesus H. Christ. Rather, it referred to the sighting of Alaskan outdoorsman Bartholomew P. Wolf as he arrived in Fairbanks one evening in June 1898 after a lucrative day of shearing the Cheviots on his sister’s Randy Ruminant Ranch.